Million Pines Arts & Crafts Festival

Soperton, Georgia

The Million Pines Festival

recalls the life of a Soperton citizen, the late James Fowler, who was the first person ever to plant a million pine trees, pioneering the South's leadership in forestry today.

"Million Pines, Home of James Fowler"

Each year Soperton's Iva Park becomes host to the Million Pines Arts and Crafts Festival. Beginning in 1973 as a project to help local civic clubs and community needs, it has grown to be one of the Southeast Georgia's finest events. As you browse under the shady pines, you can find crafts of days gone by as well as today's newer art techniques.

Of course the food is always delightful - reminiscent of fall cook-outs and fairs. Everything from hotdogs, hamburgers, barbeque and turkey legs to chicken and dumplings, boiled peanuts, pork rinds, funnel cakes and homemade ice cream can be found in the park.

The entertainment schedule has a variety of well known and very talented groups of individuals. There is something for everyone, so don't miss this annual event.

Treat yourself to a handwoven basket or rug woven on an antique loom. Maybe you're more interested in the skill of the potter as they work their craft before your eyes. Leather crafters will be tooling and cane furniture will be woven. Bring your Christmas list, do your Christmas shopping, choose something very special, a one-of-a-kind gift.
